We heard of this Blake's escape."

It said he "but we thought he had been recaptured.

"So we ought to have been." replied Hardy. "We've had a rough time."

Again he walked in a dream, and the world was a very fastastic place indeed.

After all, perhaps Blake was to die, and to die at the hands of his own countrymen. This would be bitter news indeed.

That night Hardy found himself in Kimberley, and Blake lay insensible in the hospital. The doctor there would not prophesy concerning him.

That night Hardy sent the following callegram to Gwen:

"Blake with me here, but dangerously till. Come immeditately."

And after he had sent it another X. M. message from the Commander-in-Chief went through, and it gave among the list of "dangerously wounded" the name of Capt. Edward Blake.

Her explanation was that she had been drinking brandy, and while under the influence of the liquor took the property when she realized the enormity of her set the next morning she tried to replace the stolen property but was unable to gain access to the rooms she had robbed.

Miss Keyes said she had come to London to attend the World's Christian Endown Convention as a delegate from a church in Minnesota.
